

WRECKED: David and Barbara Ellis's seaside home after the high winds struck

TWISTER TRAGEDY

Dad swept out to sea

THE massive storms and twisters battering Britain claimed their first victim yesterday.

Paul Bogues, 47, was swept out to sea as he walked along a harbour wall.

It was the second tragedy to hit his family this year. His son Conor, 26, was lost at sea when his fishing boat sank off their home town of Ardglass, Co Down, in January.

The weekend saw much of Britain hit by gales and torrential rain. And forecasters have warned it will get worse.

A mini-tornado struck the Grange Estate in Tuffley, Glos,

by LISA MCCARTHY

leaving a trail of devastation. Trees were uprooted, roofs wrecked and windows ripped from their frames.

In Pevensey Bay, East Sussex, pensioners David and Barbara Ellis had a narrow escape when their home collapsed.

Roads across the UK were flooded and about 12,000 homes lost power.

Weather experts last night said winds of up to 110mph are set to hit Britain over the next few days.

MeteoGroup's Nikki Berry said: "It's nasty stuff."

NO SEX TO GET TO No 1

EXCLUSIVE
by KATIE BEGLEY
X FACTOR rejects The MacDonald Brothers have given up sex.

They've slapped a nookie ban on themselves in a bid for music-chart glory.

The Scottish brothers, 20-year-olds Brian and Craig, were booted off the show on Saturday. But they are still determined to be a success and say they won't let lusty ladies get in their way of stardom.

Single

Craig said: "We're going to stay single. "Everything else can come later - right now we're concentrating on our music."

But Brian, who celebrated his 20th birthday last week, added: "The show won't harm our chances of finding someone in the future."

BOOZED-UP stars like Hollywood beauty Lindsay Lohan are driving young Brits to the bottle.

Top medic Prof Roger Williams, who treated George Best, says a growing culture of "celebrity binge drinking" is wrecking the nation's health.

The liver specialist slammed celebs like actress Lohan, 20, who has admitted she is going to Alcoholics Anonymous meetings, for the appalling example they are setting youngsters.

He said the hard-partying culture of celebs like Britney Spears, 25, who went on a 10-day bender to "get over" splitting with her husband Kevin Federline, 28, glorifies boozing.

Prof Williams said: "Celebrities should be more responsible. It is harmful because they encourage young people to drink."

And he went on to warn that A-list party people, like Charlotte Church, 20, and Girls Aloud's Sarah Harding, 25, are drinking so much that they are at risk of becoming addicted.

He said: "When you're in the public eye everyone is grabbing you drinks and though they may not be addicted they risk becoming dependent on it."

"As they drink more, that is when they become addicted - that is when the damage occurs and you cannot stop."

Prof Williams' hard-hitting comments come ahead of the UK's new drink-driving

Head for beach... in Leeds

■ by LAURA NEIL

LEEDS is to become Britain's first inland city with its own "urban beach".

The banks of the River Aire in the city centre will be transformed into a public area featuring a man-made sandy beach, volleyball courts and seating areas.

Great

Developer MEPC, who have has submitted plans for the project, hope their beach will rival the one already established on the banks of the River Seine in Paris.

MEPC also wants to create an outdoor sculpture area called the Green Room, with giant furniture, including a TV, table, sofa and lamp.

CHEESED OFF

HERBERT Meyer crashed his van when he was overcome by the smell from his load of cheese in Bavaria, Germany.

DON'T KID YOURSELF

Boozy stars are damaging our young campaign, which is launched today.

The surgeon befriended football legend Best when he carried out a liver transplant on him in 2002.

And he had to choke back tears last year when he announced the Ulsterman had died at London's Cromwell Hospital, aged just 59.

The UK is the binge-drinking centre of Europe, with nearly 6million sozzled Brits regularly having five or more drinks in one session.

Cases of cirrhosis of the liver in under-45-year-olds - the tell-tale drinking illness - have increased by a mind-boggling 900% since 1970.

And we are set to have the booziest Christmas in Europe - boosting our alcohol intake by 41% over the festive season, ahead of Germany and Russia.

YOBS in North Tyneside will get a good talking to if they start boozing in the street. New speaking signposts will blast out a warning that drink is banned as people go past.

BRIT'S BIG BURN-OUT

Birthday girl has a hot night

BRITNEY Spears went wild celebrating her 25th birthday... and accepted gifts from party-loving Paris Hilton worth a staggering £20,000.

But this time the blonde singer, who is embroiled in a bitter divorce battle with Kevin Federline, 28, actually wore knickers for her night out.

And judging from these sexy pants, she's learnt a thing or two about dignity since being caught on camera last week er, cringingly commando whilst clubbing. Britney was dirty dancing on the tables of famed eatery Mr Chow's, Los Angeles, where she had a cake full of candles.

Her pal Paris showed up with two aides carrying Brit's gifts.

Full

Our Stateside spy said: "Paris had at least 20 designer bags stuffed full."

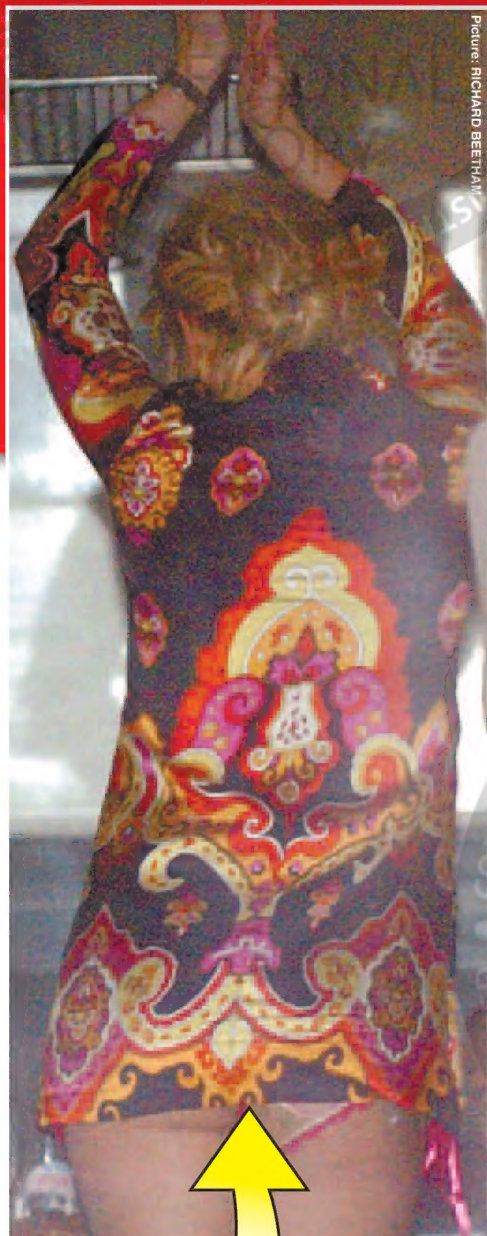

"There was a designer lighter worth £6,000, £4,000 worth of lingerie, a £5,000 handbag and £5,000 of presents for Britney's two baby sons."

Paris was earlier pictured clutching bags from top LA store Kitson.

But things are seriously sour for K-Fed. Despite pleas to appear on Oprah he's been rejected. Looks like he's starting to feel the pain of the Spears campaign.

Smiling Rach Takes it all in RACHEL Stevens was all smiles leaving An Audience With Take That and the show's after-party.

Which is more than can be said about earlier in the evening when organisers seated her next to former S-Club band member Hannah Spearritt, 25.

To say that she looked sultry is an understatement.

The sun-kissed singer, 28, right, donned a somewhat unflattering blue frock for the event at London's LWT studios.

Emmerdale's Hayley Tamaddon, 29, went for a lovely black and white number, as did Adele Silva, 26, pictured above with gorgeous Girls Aloud babe Kimberley Walsh, 24.

Other celebs cheering on the fantastic four included model Nancy Sorrell, 32, Hollyoaks honey Georgia Atkinson, 22, and Emmerdale sex siren Lucy Pargeter, 28, aka Chastity Dingle.

Lucy told us she's relieved not to be in the new series of Soapstar Superstar which is coming soon.

Lucy, who made it to the finals in the last show said: "I remember those nerves."

HUSH HUSH

WHICH American starlet is so demanding when working, she draws extra meal breaks into her contract? Except she doesn't eat a bean. The uberslim babe-in-question spends her time getting high before endlessly calling her shrink.

And she is such a wreck that she even has to resort to valium whenever she meets and greets her fans.

Cam's a dish

CAMERON Diaz has revealed she eats left-over take-away food for breakfast.

The 34-year-old actress, who is dating Justin Timberlake, 25, says she makes sure to eat breakfast.

But the Hollywood screen siren has recently started eating leftover dinner as her first meal of the day.

Cameron said: "I always eat breakfast. My phase right now is leftovers. I believe that if you put an egg with anything - then it's breakfast."

Diaz is expected in London tomorrow for the UK premiere of feel-good festive rom-com The Holiday, also starring Jude Law, 34 and Kate Winslet, 31.

SPOTTED

£183m internet spree

■ by DEAN VALLER
TODAY will be the internet's busiest shopping day – with Brits expected to splash over £183million on Christmas gifts.
During lunch hour alone it's predicted that UK shoppers will spend up to £14m on the worldwide web.
Industry insiders put the spree down to Brits feeling flush after pay day and the convenience of staying indoors.

Faves

And James Roper, of the Interactive Retail in Media Group, said that we will spend 40% more than on last year's busiest day – December 12.
The top searches for internet shoppers are: 1 Broadband; 2 Mobile phones; 3 Bratz dolls; 4 Digital cameras; 5 Laptops; 6 iPods; 7 Lingerie; 8 Barbie dolls; 9 Nintendo DS consoles; 10 LCD televisions.

Santa's running to town

■ THE annual Santa run turned Liverpool into a sea of red as hundreds of festive competitors took to the streets.
Similar charity events at Newtown in Powys, Oswestry in Shropshire and Marlow in Bucks saw thousands holding onto their beards in the winds.
But one footie nut stuck out like a sore thumb in Liverpool's Santa Dash 5k – because he was dressed in the blue of Everton.

TUG STRIKE WILL BLOCK XMAS GIFTS

Shutdown threat at ports

A STRIKE by dock staff may leave millions of gifts stranded at sea this Christmas.

Tug workers are threatening to block arrivals at British ports.

And it may mean gifts including iPods, TVs and games consoles could be stuck on container ships. Union bosses also warn shop shelves would be left empty within five days.

TGWU chief Graham Stevenson said: "Big ships can't visit Britain without the tug."

Standstill

"If they don't pull the ships in, then the ships don't come and Britain shuts down in five days."

The strike could bring all UK ports to a standstill – including Southampton, which handles most UK trade with the Far East.

Last month the huge Emma Maersk 3 ship docked in Felixstowe, Suffolk, stuffed with 45,000 tons of Christmas presents, including glitterballs, pinball machines, hair curlers and handbags.

The dispute centres around staff registration with tug employers Adsteam. Mr Stevenson added: "We want to renegotiate the registry of workers and Adsteam is being unhelpful about it."

■ by LISA MCCARTHY

But Adsteam boss Stephen Eastwood said: "We have not received any formal notice from the union regarding its intention to ballot its members."

"The formal process will take several weeks, during which a solution can be sought."

● A British firm has brewed up a storm in America – with a beer called Santa's Butt.

US authorities have banned the ale as it has Santa's image on the label and may encourage children to try to buy the alcohol.

But Peter Scholey, boss of Ridgeway Brewery, Oxford, said: "We find it bizarre our little product has been caught up in all this fuss."

A butt is a traditional brewing measure of 108 gallons. But Mr Scholey accepted it is also US slang for a backside.

DEAD STUPID

Funeral chiefs' bid to stop pallbearers suing

PALLBEARERS are being asked to sign forms promising not to sue if they put their backs out.

Funeral directors are insisting mourners are aware of the risks before they shoulder the coffin. They fear carrying a body the size of recently-departed Corrie butcher Fred Elliot could cause injury.

Liability

The bizarre move emerged at the funeral of war hero Jack Hole, 86.

His ex-comrades were approached by an undertaker with a form as they prepared to carry his coffin into a crematorium. Chris Powell, 73, said: "We were flabbergasted. He said it was a declaration that absolved them of any liability if we slipped a disc."

by EMMA WALL

"The pallbearers were all in their 70s but they were all six-footers and thought it was ridiculous."

Geoff Hinton, of Pigeon & Son who organised Jack's funeral in Cardiff, defended the forms. He said: "People are getting heavier and a solid coffin can be a big weight."

But local Tory MP Phil Davies said: "It's ridiculous. The compensation culture is getting out of hand."

JOE MOTT'S DOUBLE AWARD WINNING

Edited by KIM DAWSON

MOTT

JASON Donovan's greatest hits album is being re-released to celebrate the 38-year-old's I'm A Celebrity Get Me Out Of Here success. Don't miss out jungle lovers, it's out today.

SHOT

ICE TRY PINK

PINK has sent out a plea to Arctic Monkeys to work with her.

The Nobody Knows singer, 27, reckons Britain has better taste in music than her homeland of America.

Talking on ITV's Greatest Hits show this Friday she says: "The first time I heard Arctic Monkeys was on Radio 1. I fell in love with their attitude - so original. I would like to do a collaboration with them."

IN LOVE: Pink

JAKE SHEARS did a Britney while performing on Greatest Hits after Scissor Sisters lost a suitcase of clothes following a visit to Germany. The flamboyant 28-year-old had no clean undies so was forced to go commando.

JIM'S 'CURE'

STRESS: James

JAMES Morrison is turning to alternative therapy to cope with fame's pressures.

He dipped into the freebie room after recording his slot for the Greatest Hits show and picked up a titanium Q-Link bracelet. Apparently it helps "re-balance energy levels".

Jim, 21, whose debut album Undiscovered went straight to No.1, also blagged some clothes for his girlfriend.

Gary couldn't Take success

EXCLUSIVE

GARY Barlow was convinced Take That's ITV1 Audience With... Live show would be a flop after the rehearsal went TOO well.

The modest singer told me at Saturday's afterparty he was thrilled at the response after they insisted on being the first act to record the show totally live.

Gaz, 35, said: "We were actually quite nervous because the rehearsal went so well we wondered what would go wrong when we did it for real. "Thankfully it went brilliantly and I think we've set a precedent for others to do the show live."

Hectic

I'd like to say cheers to Take That and their manager Jonathan Wild for sorting me out with a front-row seat to watch the amazing show, which was like a mini version of their stunning comeback arena tour.

A ton of celebrity guests including funnymen Peter Kay, 33, and sexy Girls Aloud singer Kimberley Walsh, 25, watched as Gary, Mark Owen, 34, Jason Orange, 36, and NU rave is set to be the big sound for 2007, starting with an Xmas Day release for Big Bass v Michelle Narine. Listen out for What You Do (Playing With Stones) which samples classic rave Playing With Knives.

SHOT

Howard Donald, 38, performed their hits and new songs.

It was a fitting end to a hectic week promoting comeback album Beautiful World, which like single Patience is sitting at No.1.

Gleeful Jason told me: "It feels like we've achieved something, and for me it's a testament to good friendship and hard work."

HMV's Gennaro Castaldo commented: "A No.1 single and album in the same week is a feat that eludes most artists but for Take That to pull it off is truly amazing."

It's not quite feet-up time for the manband. Gary revealed: "We're performing Shine on the finale of The X Factor and hopefully that will be the next single."

"If you'd have told me 14 months ago we'd have a No.1 album and single in the same week, our first ever, I'd have never believed you."

HORROR STUNT:
Brave Johnny jumps to his death while on a dream trip to the States

HOL LEAP OF DEATH

'It'll change yer life, dude'

THIS is the horrifying moment when Johnny Hodges plunged 70ft to his death while on a dream round-the-world holiday.

He was urged to do the stunt by a US trek guide, who told him: "It's gonna change your life, dude."

But Johnny, 23, died instantly from head injuries as he hit the freezing waters of Lake Powell, Arizona.

Battle

His body was found in the lake two days later - 273ft below the surface.

Now, more than two years after the plunge, his mum Diane has finally won her legal battle for compensation from Trek-America, the company that organised the trip.

Camcorder footage taken at the site showed guide Eddie Ormond telling him to jump, saying: "It's gonna change your life, dude - it's what we do." The video then shows the business graduate, of Groby, Leics, jumping to his death on September 11, 2004.

■ by ED CHATTERTON

Diane, 60, said: "John was not a half-baked birdbrain. He was a mature, highly intelligent man who mistakenly placed his trust in a company with over 30 years of trekking experience."

She said she could not disclose the amount of compensation awarded.

But she added: "The money itself does not matter to me, because it does not bring John back. But if it serves as a warning to others and saves somebody else's life, then he hasn't died in vein."

Trek-America has always denied encouraging Johnny to leap, but bosses quickly banned any similar stunts.

A verdict of death by misadventure was recorded at an inquest in May.

LAD OF 7 LOCKED IN 'CELL' School hols torment

by JERRY LAWTON
WICKED parents kept their seven-year-old son caged in a "cell" throughout the six-week school summer holidays.

They locked him in an 10ft by 4ft hallway, feeding him through a door and only letting him out to use the loo.

He lived on a single mattress in a 6ft by 2ft recess under the stairs. The couple claimed it was a "naughty step" punishment as recommended by TV Supernanny Jo Frost.

But while Jo, 36, recommends short-term punishment for problem kids on her Channel 4 show, the parents turned it into a permanent arrangement.

The mum, 33, and stepdad, 39, who cannot be named to protect their son's identity, were spared jail after each admitted child cruelty.

Judge Michael Pert QC told Leicester Crown Court: "To effectively imprison him for six weeks at his tender age is just beyond the pale."

Kidding around

IT SEEMS newly-single Kid Rock is already over his four-month marriage to Pamela Anderson. The 35-year-old rocker – real name Bob Ritchie – spent a night partying with a bevy of beauties at Tao nightclub in Las Vegas.

Last week Kid dumped the ex-Baywatch babe, 39, because of her "humiliating" role in the Borat film.

Devil

But he freed them so they could look after their three other children.

The mum, from Leicester, branded her son, who is now in care, "The Devil".

She said he once left toys on stairs so she would fall down.

The couple were given two-year community orders with supervision requirements.

TRACY TOT SHOCK FOR DAD STEVE

PRESSURE: Daddy Steve

CORONATION ST.

EXCLUSIVE by JOHN MAHONEY
CABBIE Steve McDonald is forced to become a full-time dad when superbitch Tracy Barlow is banged up for murder.

He's always wanted to play a bigger part in the upbringing of his daughter Amy – the product of a boozy one-night stand with Tracy.

And he thinks his prayers have been answered when Tracy is charged over the death of her builder boyfriend Charlie Stubbs (Bill Ward, 39).

But Steve (Simon Gregson, 32) soon discovers just how demanding being a full-time parent can be as he tries to juggle his fatherly responsibilities around his job running Streetcars.

And out of desperation he has to rope in his taxi receptionist Eileen Grimshaw (Sue Cleaver, 41) as a childminder.

He tells her: "I'll cover all your shifts for you if you pick Amy up from nursery and look after her until I finish work."

It's all new for Steve, whose access to Amy has been severely restricted by hard-hearted Tracy (Kate Ford, 29).

Prove

But he's prepared to do whatever it takes to prove himself a good dad for little Amy, played by two-year-old Amber Chadwick.

A source said: "Steve swiftly realises that being a parent is very much a full-time job in itself."

"He's determined to make it work and turns to Eileen for help, knowing she's brought up two sons and can help take the pressure off."

john.mahoney@dailystar.co.uk

EASTENDER Bert Atkinson's cancer-stricken wife Evie stuns him on her death-bed by revealing he has a secret son – and also that the daughter he gave up when he was in prison has died.

Laurel in fix

LAUREL Thomas (Charlotte Bellamy, 33) is forced to tell her vicar husband Ashley (John Middleton, 53) she is pregnant – after he tells her to put family plans on hold. The actress is expecting a baby in real life, too.
